

Classroom activities

1. Propaganda was an important tool for making a substantive case in an eye-catching fashion. Work together in groups to design new slogans for the women's suffrage movement from a contemporary perspective. If it helps, divide up the project so some students are writing slogans, while others use their artistic skills to draw and design a banner.
2. Research the political and ethical issues facing women in America today. How are women fighting for equal rights in our current time period? What are the arguments on each side of the issue you are investigating?
